Grant pays dividends

Tech award pays for communications improvements

By Scott Cousins
Staff writer

If technology and computer skills are going to determine the success or failure of students, both now and in the future, the Madison School District is determined it will succeed. Thanks to a $698,000 E-rate award, the district is about half-way through a major overhaul of its communications systems and computer labs.

The improvements include a new T-1 line, giving the district one for data and one for voice transmission; a centralized communications hub in the Madison Middle School; voice and data lines in every classroom; telephones in every classroom and a voice message system for every family with children in the school district.

Barb Cox, information technology director for the district, said workers were about half-way finished with the installation of the hardware needed for the communications system.

Eagle Park Acres annexation denied

Madison Council members vote down action

By Scott Cousins
Staff writer

Madison City Council members voted against taking action to annex Eagle Park Acres for now, but left residents the option of paying the legal cost to annex individual properties into the city.

The council has been considering the annexation of the Eagle Park Area at the request of residents and the city's two black aldermen.

While Mayor John Hamm

cited low census figures, the present finances and the need to hire more people for police and street department service if the area is annexed, Alderman Norris Horton has claimed that the issue is race.

The area, surrounded by Madison on three sides and Venice on one, is overwhelmingly black, while the two most recently annexed populated areas in the city - East Madison and Cloverleaf - are predominantly white.

At Tuesday's meeting, Alderman and Finance Committee chairman Alexis Lux recommended the city not consider annexing the area at this time citing the costs associated, especially police and street services.

Hamm said that one consideration was that according to U.S. Census Bureau figures, only 90 people live in the Eagle Park neighborhood.

Horton objected saying the figures were "ridiculous."

Hamm agreed the figures were low because of low participation in the 1990 census. Real population estimates in the area range from a low

50 turn out for park meeting

Suggestions indicate public satisfied with district actions

By Scott Cousins
Staff writer

About 50 Granite City residents turned out to listen to and talk about the Park District's plans for the future.

The hour-long meeting was held at the Brown Recreational Center as part of the Park District's development of a five-year master plan.

"I think that after listening to some of the questions and comments the people had, they seem to be very satisfied with the park district," Director Dave Polivick said.

He said they expected more criticism or suggestions.

the good job."

District officials have been working on the plan for more than two years.

After Tuesday's public meeting Park District officials will prepare the final draft of the master plan, which will probably be completed in late January or February. Another public hearing will be held in February, and the plan adopted a month or two later.

Polivick said one thing they have heard, both at the meeting and through the surveys, is a desire for more hiking and walking trails.

"There have been a lot of people who have indicated they want to see a new trail built in Worthen Park on the

French Village Drive-in faces end of the road

Caseyville theatre opened in 1939

By Jennifer Saxton
Staff writer

For years, the French Village Drive-in provided entertainment ment to families, couples and teenagers. But after time, the drive-in saw the end of larger-than-life pictures and the comforts of watching a movie from within one's car.

Richard Wright has owned the drive-in since 1977. Soon after taking ownership, he leased the open air theater to the Bloomer Amusement Company.

The drive-in opened in the summer of 1939. In its height of popularity, the drive-in served as a haven for family outings and a teenage hang-out.

It was built by Paramount Publix Great States Inc., which was a division of Paramount Pictures. Then Paramount was the largest and only movie production company in the United States.

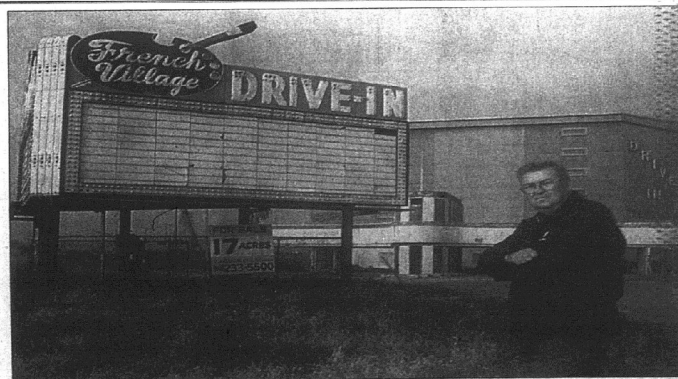

This particular drive-in may have been the first drive-in in Illinois, built experimentally by Paramount.

"Everything Paramount wanted at a drive-in, they put at this one," Wright said.

At one time, it also served as an outdoor theater.

Seniors need to be prepared for Y2K possibilities

By Margo E. Schreiber

QUESTION: As the year comes to a close, I'm getting a bit nervous about Y2K, especially because I'm older and live alone. I don't know whether it's nothing to worry about or if I actually need to prepare for the worst. What should I do?

ANSWER: First, let me tell you that you are not alone in your concerns about Y2K. This technology bug may cause computers to confuse the year 2000 with 1900. No one knows what problems may occur, how widespread they are or how long they will last.

The good news is that federal, state and local governments, as well as banks and other financial institutions, retail businesses and every other group affected by this problem have been working together to attempt to solve it and insure that public health and safety services will not be disrupted when the new millennium starts.

So, let us not think of Dec. 31 at midnight as "doomsday." There is no reason to overreact. But, here is what you should do: you should prepare just as you would for the winter storm season, in case there are disruptions with electricity, telephone or appliances, etc.

That means it's a good idea to have the following on hand:

- Three-day supply of food and water
- Battery-powered radio and flashlights
- Extra batteries
- Prescription and non-prescription medications
- Small amount of cash
- Seasonal outdoor clothes
- At least a half-tank of gas and other essentials

Ask your doctor how to handle your medical conditions should an emergency arise. Make a list of all your medical conditions and have your medical insurance and Medicare cards readily available. As always, it would be beneficial to have a list of doctors and relatives and friends who should be contacted, if need be.

If possible, make sure you have an extra set of items you may need such as eyeglasses, hearing aid batteries, wheelchair batteries or oxygen. If you receive home health services and/or use medical equipment in your home that uses electricity, contact your doctor and health services provider to discuss what you should do if an emergency arises during the date change.

For those who have physical impairments and use a cane or a walker, for example, it would be wise to make arrangements with your relatives and/or neighbors to regularly visit.

Also, listen for information about hazardous weather and other events on battery-operated radios and television, heed the advice of the American Red Cross and local officials. If you are told to evacuate, leave right away.

In some communities, senior citizens who need help and/or must have assistance for special transportation during an evacuation, may take advantage of advance registration systems in the community.

For more information about the availability of these registration systems, contact your local American Red Cross chapter.

Finally, watch out for scam artists! Scam artists are trying to exploit seniors by telephoning or going door-to-door to sell unnecessary Y2K items such as expensive generators, survival kits, additional insurance coverage, etc.

Those who claim they are selling something as a representative of the Illinois Emergency Management Agency or any other state agency is misrepresenting themselves. Anyone insisting that "time is running out" and you need such items is using scare tactics. And, by all means, do not give out your bank account number.

Remember you can always check with Illinois Department on Aging Senior HelpLine at (800) 252-8966 if you are unsure about how to get ready for Y2K or for the winter storm season. You can also contact your local emergency service disaster agencies for information about what to do during an evacuation. (Contact the Illinois Emergency Management Agency at (800) 782-1860 for the address and telephone number of the agencies.)

The important thing is to use the information outlined in this column and take responsibility to plan for any type of disaster situation. Having the right supplies handy and making arrangements with family, friends and neighbors to visit, are just two key ways.

Even if Y2K doesn't cause major problems, it is still good sense to know what to do in the event of any kind of disaster. Whether a blizzard, tornado, flood or anything else.

Let's all be prepared!

Margo E. Schreiber is the director of Illinois Department on Aging.

Letter of thanks

TO THE EDITOR:
As Public Relations chairman for the Korean War Veterans Association (Imjin Chapter) I would like to take this opportunity to thank the Metro East merchants for allowing us the use of their doorways and the many public contributors who patronized our Blue Daisies event during the months of October and November. Many are confused when they see these flowers and at the same time they remember the Red Poppies offered by the other veterans' organizations. The Blue Daisies are the products of the Korean War Veterans Association, while the Red Poppies are from the American Legion and the VFW. Many of our workers belong to all of these organizations, however, we all have one common goal in mind and that is to help the veteran. Again, thanks to everyone.

No exceptions

TO THE EDITOR:
Bob DesPain claims I had him arrested at the October Library Board meeting. I saw it differently. DesPain has continually broken Library and Open Meeting Act rules. This night was no exception.
When Richard Wallace and Bob Herr made a quiet and private remark to each other, DesPain charged forward like a schoolyard bully, a full one-third the length of the boardroom. I warned him to return to the videotaping area. He refused. I warned him again and he refused. He was then arrested for trespassing. The officers were incredibly polite and gentle with DesPain. Now, if you are given a choice between leaving and being arrested, and you choose to be arrested, I believe you have made a cognizant and informed choice. DesPain arrested himself, simple as that.
The videotaping rules are equally simple.

Taping can only take place in the boardroom during meetings. Taping will begin at commencement of the meeting and end with adjournment (i.e. "gavel to gavel"). The videotaper will be stationed on the west end of the boardroom. DesPain is furnished with a very comfortable chair donated by past Board members, not with tax money.
These are the rules that DesPain continually breaks. He used the bully tactic before during the last City Council Forum where he advanced on the city clerk, who was speaking as a citizen. Only the angry reaction of Louis Jackstadt and the audience prevented DesPain from additional childish behavior. DesPain has even followed Library Trustees into the parking lot after a board meeting, videotaping them the entire time.
I will continue to hold DesPain accountable for his actions and will fight every unchristian and unethical attack upon the library and its staff.

More than rebuke

TO THE EDITOR:
Collinsville Councilman Michael Bartsch deserves more than just a rebuke from resident Alverna Wrigley and the community for attending the school board meeting instead of the city council meeting. This guy is a non-contributor when he is present at the meetings.
It would be of no surprise to me to learn that Bartsch is being paid by the school district to attend the graduate classes in order to qualify for a teacher's salary increase. The newspaper article stated he defended himself but that in not the way I see it.
In fact he was paid a councilman's salary for attending a school board meeting while the school board members were performing their community obligations without compensation. What a way to go.
His earlier reason for missing council meetings was that he had military reserve duties and now he has added another layer of reasons why he will not attend meetings.

For obvious reasons Bartsch did not want to tell the voters when he was campaigning, that he would not have time to serve the community because he had so many time consuming financial enhancement interests. Now that everyone is aware of this, the next appropriate step for Bartsch would be to hand in his resignation.
This is not likely to happen because he would then be without the councilman's salary he is receiving for his lackluster performance.
Mayor Schaeffer and Bartsch are both teachers so it is understandable that as reported, the Mayor will support Bartsch whenever it is something he (Bartsch) needs to do.
Well, at least as long as the cost is coming out of the taxpayer's pocket. Bartsch, give some serious thought to the resignation idea, you might like it.

Praise for kids

TO THE EDITOR:
With so many negative comments being made concerning our youth of today, I'd like to present a completely opposite thought by expressing the total joy I had greeting the children on Halloween - infants through teens.
To help with the fun, while I sat outside, this warm evening I asked the older ones to sing or dance for me to earn their bag of candy! Almost everyone said, "Thank You" and some wished me a nice evening.
This is our first year in this home and I can't recall a Halloween as rewarding. The "Kids" (107 in one hour) were wonderful!

Egg safety regulations now federal matter

By April Calvin
Staff writer

Normalizing egg safety regulations is now a federal concern.

"Our country has one of the safest egg supplies in the world, but we have the science and know-how to make it even safer," said U.S. Sen. Dick Durbin.

Legislation proposed by Durbin (D-Illinois), originally cosponsored by Sen. Tom Harkin (D-Iowa), on the Senate Agriculture Committee, would require uniform expiration dates and warning labels on cartons, and prohibit the return of unsold eggs from retailers to plants where there may be "washed" and sent back for resale.

"That was never a practice at our plant," said Al Becker, president of Germantown Eggs Company. "We have a USDA inspector on-site daily," Becker said.

For that assurance, the company must pay a fee to the USDA, who then pays the inspector's salary.

Durbin's proposal would distill all egg safety responsibilities under the control of one agency. The Food Safety and Inspection Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture would be given the responsibility to inspect and regulate shell eggs from the farm to the grocer in order to protect public health. This responsibility is currently divided between four federal agencies.

"I'd wholly concur if one agency had all the responsibility," said Jerry Robertson, egg program manager for the State of Illinois' Department of Agriculture, adding that his department has had a lot of experience with just such inspections.

If the proposed legislation passes, egg cartons will be required to warn consumers of the risks associated with eating raw or undercooked eggs. Pasteurized shell eggs will be exempt.

All eggs are currently required to carry the "keep refrigerated" label.

Illinois state regulations also require that cartons carry the grade, size, day of packaging and sell by dates. Grade A eggs must have a sell by date no later than 30 days of packing, and grade AA eggs, no later than 15 days from packing.

All shell eggs will be required to carry uniform expiration dates. Eggs may not be older than 21 days from the date of lay when packed, and have an expiration date of no more than 30 days from the packing date.

"If it's well-maintained, refrigerated, it's probably good for three or four months," said Becker, although Germantown Eggs Co. gives their eggs a 30-day sell by date.

Becker said, "That is something I would like to see, also, a universal sell-by coding."

"Eggs are not a hazardous food item any more than pork," said Becker.

Salmonella enteritidis is a bacteria commonly found in raw or undercooked eggs. This bacteria caused 300,000 cases of illness and 230 deaths nationwide in 1997. In 1998, the Illinois Department of Public Health recorded 405 illnesses and five deaths from the bacteria.

Previous SE outbreaks in Illinois include 1,100 cases in 1990, 22 cases in 1993, and 13 cases reported in 1993 from bearnaise sauce.

Becker said, "The average consumer would have an incident of eating an SE egg once in 80 years, and only if that egg is not properly cooked."

Some 67 billion eggs are sold each year in the U.S. In-shell eggs make up 70 percent of that total. The remaining 30 percent are liquid, frozen or dried egg products.

be performed in the afternoon on the stage that came out from the screen. There were dressing rooms inside the stage. The playground once had seats where spectators could be closer to the stage, rather than in their cars. The concession stand resembled a restaurant back then, Wright said, with fried chicken dinners on Sunday.

His wife, Betty Wright, said when they owned the drive-in, they were the first to start selling pizza at the concession stand.

Paramount was also known for building larger, palace-like theaters throughout the country.

"At that time, people dressed up when they went to the theater and Paramount did not know how people would respond to the drive-in where they could dress however they wanted," Wright said.

But through the years, the drive-in lost its popularity and its family appeal. Since the late 1990s, the large screen has sat silent and movie-less.

"There were too many hassles that made it impossible for us to keep the drive-in open," Wright said.

Since the drive-in closed, Wright said he can't believe what has happened to the place with looters and vandals.

Currently, the property has been proposed to the Village of Caseyville to house Health Source One, a new multi-specialty medical center.

of about 500 to a more probable figure of 700 to 800.

However, Hamm said the city would only receive population based funds - such as motor fuel tax and other state revenues - based on the official figure of 90.

After some additional discussion, the motion not to consider annexation failed. A 5-2 vote was approved 5-2, with Horton and Rosshelle Williams-Gardner voting no. Alderman Eleanor Armour arrived after the vote was taken.

After the vote, Horton complained that the vote was "discrimination" by Council. He said the council had "overlooked everything with a fine tooth comb to find reasons not to annex" the area.

However, Council did approve a motion to include 11 homes in the Eagle Park area along with a portion of its residential Tax Increment Financing district, something Horton had asked for at the last Council meeting.

The main focus of the TIF in the residential areas is to provide sewers and other infrastructure to the area. The area was desperately needed in Eagle Park. But because of the cost of putting in sewers to that area - $392,000, the area is to be annexed to Juniper Associates - it will probably not be considered until the rest of the neighborhood is annexed.

_____ in the meeting.

Horton made a motion seconded by Williams-Gardner to pay the cost of annexing individual properties of Eagle Park residents who were contiguous to the city and requested annexation. The cost of annexing an individual parcel of property is between $200 and $400. One of the reasons the East Madison and Cloverleaf areas were taken at once was to avoid the cost of paying the individual costs. The vote failed 5-2.

Williams-Gardner then motioned to allow Eagle Park residents contiguous to the city to request annexation if they pay the legal cost.

That was unanimously approved.

other side of town," he said. "Wilson Park is so heavily used people want another one."

The plan would be used to guide park use and development through 2015.

The district has been conducting a survey, and has received about 160 replies.

The survey asks what direction the district should go, what people's interests are and their levels of participation in recreational activities.

Polivick said they would still accept surveys for some time. The survey can be obtained at the Park District office in Wilson Park.

The survey asks residents to rate what kind of improvements and programs they are interested in. Should the district consider expanding the number or size of parks and if the public would support a tax increase for more programs and opportunities.

As part of the master plan the district will consider buildings and programs to individual trees.

The entire district includes 12 parks on 115.8 acres, 18 full-time employees and serves a population of about 900.

At this time, the Park District has 12 parks ranging from one to 70 acres and 18 full-time employees.

The E-rate program was started by the U.S. government several years ago as an initiative to bring the Internet into each school. Cox said she and her partner received a $668,556.90 award. Cox said this was one of the largest amounts awarded in the state and the national average per application was $42,000.

"We were in wave two of the E-rate funding," she said. "The first year we applied and didn't get anything."

"We are more than halfway finished with the school," she said.

The middle school was picked as a communication hub because of design and location with the other buildings.

Because they are older, they were not designed for the extensive wiring and do not have enough electrical outlets to run all the hardware.

"We're hoping that the phone system will be ready by the end of December," she said.

In addition to the new communications system, Cox said, she still working to improve its use of computer technology in the classroom.

"We're working on dealing with our teachers," Cox said. "We plan to continue integrating technology into our curriculum."

She thinks students are coming in with a purpose to the computer lab," she said.

Cox said she helped students apply for college at North Carolina University.

"The district is also using the lab to help students reach to the community," with classes for district residents from 4 to 7 p.m. Mondays and Wednesdays.

Last year, the district offered a series of classes on specific topics, but now most of the community use is project-oriented.

"Elaine Shipcoff, one of our tech team members, did a project with many of the community people where they made a Madison cookbook," Cox said. "This is a fun activity and enabled them to use a lot of different types of technology."

Kirgan signs letter with Cornhuskers

Granite City senior ready to concentrate on state crown

By Rick Broome
Staff writer

Granite City senior wrestler George Kirgan is ready to join the Cornhuskers.

Kirgan, a third-place finisher last winter in the IHSA Class AA state wrestling tournament at 160 pounds, signed a national letter of intent last week to attend the University of Nebraska.

"It feels good," Kirgan said. "It gets a lot of pressure off of you, not having to go the whole season wondering what if I get hurt or what if I don't wrestle up to my potential. It's a little scary, when you don't know where you are going to go."

"I visited once and I really liked it. I liked the campus, I liked all the guys on the team. I liked the coaching staff. The program has a lot of promise in the future. I thought it would be the best place for me."

Kirgan will join a college team he believes is on the rise.

"The recruiting just speaks for itself, what they have in the room just now," George said. "They have three or four guys that are No. 1 recruits. No. 1 ranked guys in their weight class from the year before. They have guys who have come in and become all-Americans. That shows a lot right there, just the team itself. The recruits from this year, too, are up there. The weight class just above me is probably the No. 1 recruit at 184 (pounds). He will be my wrestling partner, so I will be able to get even better."

At Kirgan, who is taking the helm of the Granite City program this season after a one-year stint in Collinsville, is understandably pleased for his son.

"It's a dream come true," the elder Kirgan said. "He has worked real hard and he deserves it. He has done all of the off-season work."

"He gives back. He works with the younger kids in the room, the Kids Club, the feeder program. Even last

Watching Kirgan sign are (from left): his mother, Joann; Granite City athletic director Jerry McKechnan; and his father, Allen Kirgan. year, when I was at Collinsville, he would come up and help me with the spring and summer programs for those kids. He is always doing the little bit extra that you would hope everyone does, whether it is after we are done with our conditioning running some more, or drilling with one of the coaches for an unspecified length of time. He is always doing the extra stuff."

After spending the autumn at linebacker for the Warriors football team, George Kirgan isn't sure which weight class he will land in for wrestling.

"George said, 'Just from the last couple of practices I have been losing five pounds just working out. After football season during the break, I have just been lifting a lot. Now since we are getting in harder practices I will lose

"I think I will start at 171."

Warriors tie Cavs to open

Granite City's debut in Mid-States OK with Yurkovich

By Rick Broome
Staff writer

Granite City opened the Mid-States Club Hockey Association season with a tie Saturday night.

The Warriors played to CLUB ICE HOCKEY tie with St.

Louis DuBourg in a game played in Affton.

"We were pretty happy with the way the game went," Granite City coach Dave Yurkovich said. "We have a lot of new faces this year. It will take a couple of games in to get everyone together."

The Warriors scored just 16 seconds into the game. After John Paul Dickerson fired a shot from the point, Donnie Dickerson got the rebound and fed it to Danny Ferguson right in front. Ferguson buried it.

The Warriors held the lead until 5:04 of the second period, when the Cavaliers tied the score 1-1.

DuBourg went ahead at the 7:21 mark of the third period, when the Warriors loosened up on the man-advantage.

"We killed off some penalties and then we went on the power play," Yurkovich said.

"Unfortunately, we gave up a shorthanded goal. Our coverage was slack and they went around our defense to score."

With 4:11 to play, Ty Suhre stole the puck at his own blue line, beat the defender in the neutral zone, and went in on a breakaway. His goal gave the Warriors their 2-2 season-opening result.

"The effort was there. We had plenty of effort from everybody," Yurkovich said. "What we lacked a little bit at times was the energy, especially later in the second and third periods. We had some kids who weren't ready for the physical part of the game."

"We need to prepare ourselves physically in the next few weeks. Ty and Greg (Pritchard) lacked lengthy amounts of endurance and couldn't sustain the attack. Greg was just coming off of the flu and Ty didn't have a chance to be part of our summer program because of golf."

The Warriors outshot the Cavaliers 39-15 overall — 12-7 in the first period, 10-5 in the second, and 17-4 in the third.

"Their goaltender played phenomenal and kept them in it," Yurkovich said. "We dominated them, especially in the third period, and missed two open nets. It wasn't like we didn't have chances to win. I was happy with the way things went. I just would have liked to win with the way we dominated."

"Lester Grobe played in goal. He played pretty well and looked confident. Robbie Gerber and the other young kids played well, especially on defense."

Yurkovich thinks every game will help his young team gain experience this winter to make some noise later in the Mid-States season.

"Two things we have to work on are not forcing the play and getting rid of the puck, dumping it out," Yurkovich said. "I attribute the trouble we had with that to these kids getting used to each other."

The Warriors face St. Louis St. Mary's on Friday night in Affton. The game begins at 9:45 p.m.

East St. Louis standout signs letter of intent to play college basketball in New York City

By Rick Broome
Staff writer

The Metro East's premier basketball talent is heading to the hotbed of hoops — New York City.

East St. Louis senior Darius Miles signed a letter of intent Wednesday to play college basketball at St. John's University in New York.

Miles, a 6-foot-9 center, is ranked among the top high school basketball players in the nation by numerous publications and scouting services. He was named to the preseason All-America first team by Street & Smith's College Basketball.

"I went on a visit and I felt right with the players, I felt right with the coaches, and I felt right with the city," Miles said. "All of that together made me feel more right with St. John's than all of the other places I visited. That's why I picked St. John's."

Miles averaged 16.4 points, 12.8 rebounds and a St. Louis region-leading 8.3 blocked shots per game last season in leading East St. Louis to the state tournament. The Flyers lost in the IHSA Class AA state quarterfinals to eventual state champion Westchester St. Joseph.

As a sophomore attending East St. Louis Lincoln, before the two schools merged, Miles averaged 14.5 points, 10.3 rebounds and 7.4 blocked shots per game. The Tigers were sectional champions in that 1997-98 season.

Miles said he made his final decision the day before the signing, weighing the choices to make the best decision for his future in basketball.

"I wanted to take all five of my visits and give everybody a chance because I told them that I would give them a chance," Miles said. "I spoke to (Philadelphia 76ers guard and former Saint Louis University star) Larry (Hughes), a few times and he told me that Darius just had to take care of Darius, and I tried to do that."

Saint Louis University and DePaul University were among the finalists in Miles' decision. "I am kind of glad that it's over," Miles said. "They called every day. I tried to stay away from home sometimes. Sometimes I told my mom to please tell them that I wasn't there but she made me take the calls."

Miles' mother, Ethel, was very involved in the recruiting process.

"I know a lot of the coaches feel like they were recruiting me, because some of them said so," Ethel Miles said. "Darius stayed on the move all the time. He made this decision and I hope it works out best for him."

"They are getting not only a great athlete, but a fine young man," Flyers athletic director Ted Daniels said.

Miles now can concentrate on this season, which carries high hopes for East St. Louis.

"We want Darius to focus now on basketball at East St. Louis High School, because we are looking for a state championship, a national championship."

"Daniels said, 'We are asking him to lead the way. We have a legendary coach, a great assistant staff, and a good group of teammates. That's what makes East St. Louis basketball what it is today.'"

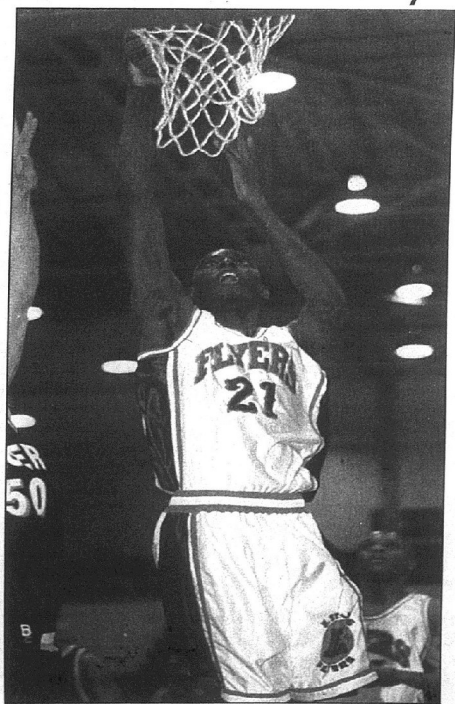

East St. Louis coach Bennie Lewis also is pleased for Miles and happy to have his leading player's full concentration on the 1999-2000 season.

"I am happy this is over with because we have been needing Darius to run our offense and work on what we need to do in practice, and he has been gone for about the last six weeks," Flyers coach Bennie Lewis said. "So I am glad it is over with. Weekends are when we really do most of our work and we need everybody there. One person or two people missing creates a problem."

"I would like to congratulate Darius on his choice. I hope that everything works out for him in the future."

Miles gave credit to his returning teammates, who will look to take some of the pressure off of the big man in the middle. "I am not the best player on the team," Miles said. "We have players like Phillip Gilbert, Lynn Hughes and so on. Hopefully we can go back to state and hopefully we can do better than we did last year. It was a great feeling going to state. Everybody on the team will help us win this year, just like last year."

Miles was careful not to address the issue of the National Basketball Association and possible early entry. But when asked how long he plans to stay in college, the bright lights of big-time professional competition were clearly in the back of his mind.

"If everything goes right, I will stay two or three years," Miles said. "Then we'll see."

Sports

Century of sports celebration recognizes Metro East individuals

St. Louis celebrated a century of sports Monday night at the Fox Theatre. "The First Century of Saint Louis Sports Celebration" was a look at St. Louis' rich sports tradition, from the first Olympics held in the United States in 1904 to Mark McGwire's home run accomplishments in 1998, and many events in between.

Sometimes this side of the river, now commonly known as Metro East, feels slighted in these types of events. I don't think that was the case Monday night. No fewer than 12 Metro East athletes and officials were recognized at the gala event, which was attended by more than 4,000 people. The Metro East folks took center stage, getting their just applause with the likes of Stan Musial, Dan Dierdorf and countless others who filled the Fox stage by the time the three-hour-plus show was completed.

Yes, it was a celebration. It wasn't a time to rate the all-time greats, although Jackie Joyner-Kersey and Musial were recognized at the end as the St. Louis Athletics of the Century.

Bob Emig

You probably won't get an argument from anyone on those two selections. Kersey, who grew up in East St. Louis, headed the Metro East contingent. The Olympian won six medals, including three golds, a silver and two bronzes in heptathlon and long jump competition. She is recognized by many as the world's greatest female athlete of all time. When interviewed by emcee Bob Costas, Jackie didn't dwell on her accomplishments but instead spoke about — and thanked people for — the support she has received from the creation of the new youth center that bears her name in East St. Louis. Jackie's brother, Al Joyner, also was recognized for his accomplishments in winning the triple jump at the 1984 Olympics in Los Angeles.

Other metro-east people in attendance who were recognized on stage were:

- Craig Virgin, Lebanon, two-time world cross country champion, second-place finisher in the 1981 Boston Marathon, and Olympic distance runner;
- Tom Jager, Collinsville, two-time Olympic gold swimming medalist in the 400-meter freestyle relay and world record holder in the 50-meter freestyle;
- Eric Wright, East St. Louis, former University of Missouri football standout who played defensive back in four Super Bowls for the San Francisco 49ers;
- Greg Lane, Wood River, who starred at quarterback for Missouri from 1963-65 and later refereed in the National Football League;

- Andy Philip, Granite City, who was College Basketball Player of the Year in 1943 while playing for the University of Illinois and later played professional baseball and basketball;
- Harry Gallatin, Roxana, who played 10 years in the NBA and never missed a game in 682 contests. He also coached two seasons with the St. Louis Hawks and was SIU-Edwardsville's first men's basketball coach and athletic director;

- Dave Gall, Troy, who was winning jockey in Fairmont Park history. He retired after 41 years of racing, posting the fourth-highest victory total (7,389) in thoroughbred history;
- Whitley Herzog, New Athens, considered one of the best baseball managers of all time after directing the Cardinals to the 1982 World Series championship and National League pennants in 1985 and 1987;
- Red Schoendienst, Germantown, who was involved in professional baseball for more than 55 years as a player, coach or manager; managed Cardinals to World Series title in 1967 and pennant in 1982; and was voted into Hall of Fame in 1989;

- Ed Hightower, Alton, who is nationally known as collegiate basketball official, having officiated in eight of the last 10 NCAA Division I tournaments. He won Naismith Award as college basketball official of the year in 1992.

Ron Jacober, a Highland native and longtime radio broadcaster with KMOX, helped host the show.

Other areas tied during the show were a film clip of East St. Louis native Jimmy Connors, one of the all-time great tennis players; and film clips recognizing two of the area's top sports facilities, the Gateway International Raceway in Madison and the track and field facility at SIUE.

It was a long night for most. But it was an enjoyable night. St. Louis does have a rich sports tradition. And this area can be proud that it has contributed to that tradition.

weight naturally. I'm eating well, I'm not dieting or anything.

"If my weight is low enough, I may go down to 160. But I will probably start at 171."

The transition from high school to college wrestling will demand some changes. "I have to work on my style of wrestling," George said. "Between high school and college, I have noticed a lot of the differences. Just the conditioning is a big difference. They wrestle a whole other minute in the first period. When the guys get on a single leg or a double leg, you have to scramble out of there and be able to get good positioning. There are more scrambling situations than in high school. If someone shoots in on your leg, you have to be able to get out of it. It's a big difference."

"When you wrestle in college, day-in and day-out you wrestle against good guys in meets. You have to be that prepared in your conditioning. In high school, there may be guys that you can pin right away or easily beat. You have to have a lot more endurance in the college season."

Both Kirgans are expecting a lot for George's senior season.

"I think the sky is the limit this year," Al Kirgan said. "I think he probably should have placed (at state) his sophomore year. He could have won it his junior year. He felt that he had to win it this year to be able to go to a (NCAA) division I school, and now they have already decided. So now I think he is going to get it and I think there are going to be a lot of people who end up real sorry that he already signed."

"He has done everything in the off-season to prepare himself for the season. He is very coachable, he listens, he does what he is told. He is very explosive. He will be in better condition and he will be stronger. We have some other kids on the team who will hopefully emulate him and get the job done."

FROM LAST WEEK

WINSTON CUP
 Tony Stewart became the first rookie ever to win three races and the first ever to win two in a row. His winning margin at Homestead-Miami Speedway over teammate Bobby Labonte, over five seconds, was the third largest of the year.
 A fifth-place finish earned Dale Jarrett the Winston Cup championship. Jarrett's father Ned won titles in 1961 and 1965, meaning that the two are now NASCAR's second father-and-son champions. Lee and Richard Petty were the first.

BUSCH GRAND NATIONAL
 It was also little day in the Busch Series as Dale Earnhardt Jr. locked up his second straight championship, but Joe Nemechek became the only driver to win twice at Homestead with a victory in the HoVee.com 300. Ward Burton, then leading, was penalized at the end for jumping a restart.

1999 WINSTON CUP SCHEDULE

Nov. 21 Atlanta Motor Speedway Hampton, Ga.

FEUD OF THE WEEK

Tony Stewart vs. Bobby Labonte

The Joe Gibbs Racing teammates had a bumping incident that made their team owner's nervousness apparent, thanks to the fact that he was in the NBC television booth. Labonte was obviously angry at the time, but he had settled down by race's end. "He (Stewart) would have won anyway," said Labonte. "It didn't matter."

NASCAR This Week's Monte Dutton gives his opinion: "Actually, isn't it reassuring that Stewart and Labonte would lay it all on the line against each other? Doesn't that alleviate some of the worries fans have about multicar teams? And Stewart was gracious, going so far to say, 'In all honesty, I would like to see Bobby win a championship before I would like to win one myself.' As for this particular race, however, Stewart saw an opening and went for it."

WINSTON CUP

Coming up: NAPA 500
 Where: Atlanta Motor Speedway, Hampton, Ga. (1.54-mile track), 325 laps/500.5 miles
 When: Sunday, Nov. 21
 Defending champion:

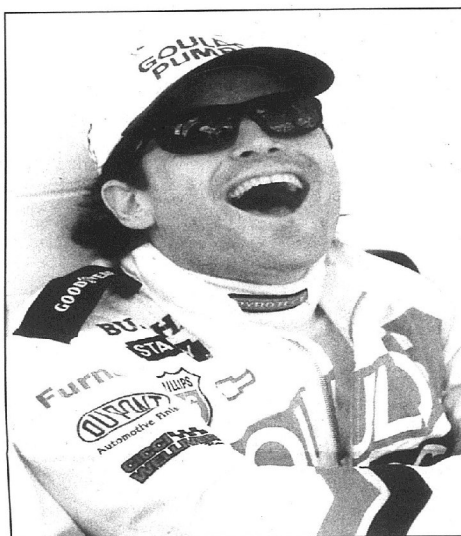

Jeff Gordon
 Event qualifying record: Geoffrey Bodine, Ford, 197.48 mph, Nov. 15, 1997
 Race record: Dale Earnhardt, Chevrolet, 163.633 mph, Nov. 12, 1995
 Notable: Once again, the championship has already been wrapped up, freeing Dale Jarrett to run for a win without being worried about consequences in the point standings. ... Earnhardt has won a record eight races here, but none since the track was reconfigured in 1997. ... Bill Elliott has won five times, second among active drivers. ... Gordon won the Cracker Barrel 500 here on March 15.

PROFILE

Mike McLaughlin

John Clark/NASCAR This Week

Mike McLaughlin has finished in the top 10 in points for five straight years.

By Monte Dutton
 NASCAR This Week
 Mike McLaughlin, nicknamed "Magic Shoes," slumped to ninth in the Busch Grand National standings this year after finishing third in 1998.
 McLaughlin has raced in five different racing divisions and won at least once in each. He began his full-time BGN career in 1994 and won for the first time the following year at Dover.
 He won both ends of a Modified/Busch North doubleheader at New Hampshire International Speedway in 1990. He was named Most Popular Driver in Busch North

NO OTHER DRIVER HAS FINISHED IN THE TOP 10 IN POINTS FIVE STRAIGHT YEARS. "We have had quite a run together; it's been a great six years together. I have that race team to thank for some very special memories. It's going to be really different next year when I race against the No. 34 car."

HOW DID IT FEEL TO NOT WIN A RACE THIS YEAR? "I never gave up. I was still hoping I could pull into victory lane in the last race and celebrate with my friends on the race team. It didn't happen, but it would have been a dream come true for me."

Your Turn

Letters From Our Readers

Dear NASCAR This Week,
 Who is responsible for the vulgar language ... heard over the national broadcast of the Oct. 17 Talladega race?
 I know ESPN was listening in on the Dale Jarrett crew/spotter/driver. Were they responsible?

Deborah Henderson
 Plainfield, Ind.

According to the Jarrett crew, ESPN had assured them that a five-second delay would be used in any broadcast of radio transmissions. For some reason unknown to them or us, the delay was either not in effect or the person in charge of monitoring it failed to do his or her job. Todd Parrott was fined $5,000 by NASCAR and has apologized for the unfortunate language. We believe a fine was appropriate, but we should all realize that sometimes things are said in the heat of battle that are regretted later.

Dear NASCAR This Week,
 My pastor and I have a disagreement about Jeff Gordon. I say he's a saved Christian, and my pastor says he is not. I think he's just mad because Jeff races on Sunday instead of going to church. I read a tract about Jeff and inside it, it is right on Jeff is a fine example for our youth, and I always hear him praising God.

Randy Humerickhouse
 Anderson, Ind.

Gordon has frequently expressed Christian beliefs and has gone as far as to lend his name and appear in commercials on behalf of Christian organizations.

House of Representatives task force hears about elder abuse

By Deborah L. Bates
Staff writer

Education is the key to prevention of elder abuse, seniors' advocates told state officials at a hearing concerning the topic recently in Collinsville.

Representatives from across the state heard testimony from advocates who work with seniors. The state legislators are responding to a 133 percent increase in reported cases of elder abuse. The House of Representatives Elder Abuse Task Force is attempting to develop legislation to prevent the abuse.

While elder abuse often takes the form of physical or emotional abuse, many of the witnesses at the hearing testified to cases of financial exploitation of the elderly.

Margaret Ireland lost $72,000 when she hired a woman to be her driver.

"She got the money and everything and there I was - no money," Ireland said. She said the woman changed Ireland's checking account address to her own and forged Ireland's signature. The woman is currently out on bail, paying $200 each month toward the money she stole from Ireland, who never was notified about a trial. Ireland said the woman gambled away most of the money on the local riverboat casinos.

"I don't have any complaint against her, except she was stealing from me," Ireland said.

Bankers could do more than almost anyone else in the state of Illinois to prevent financial abuse of the elderly, said Tom Grice, the abuse case manager with the Visiting Nurses Association.

"They don't want to reform because they don't want to lose you and me as a customer," Grice said. "It's all education."

The association received 317 calls about elder abuse from July 1, 1998, to Aug. 1, 1999, Grice said. He said some elderly are lonely and will speak on the telephone to someone they don't know for hours just to be able to talk to someone. He said that the elderly don't even know that some of what they could tell the person on the other end of the phone can leave them bankrupt. But if they are educated about the abuses, then perhaps that can prevent some of the financial exploitation or other abuses, Grice said.

"I think it's a wonderful idea to have seniors educated to educate other seniors to recognize abuse and neglect," said state Rep. Jay Hoffman, D-Collinsville.

Many of the witnesses expressed concern that because most elders are abused by their own children, they don't feel they can report the abuse.

Break-in reported at APA shelter

Kennels unlocked,
5 dogs on the loose

By Michael Heil
Staff writer

When Andrew Terrez reported to work Wednesday morning shortly after 8 a.m., he saw something that made him gasp-dogs at the Granite City Association Protection Animal Shelter straying inside and outside the facility.

"At first I thought somebody had dropped off a bunch of dogs," said Terrez, the shelter supervisor. "When I got closer I realized that they were our dogs."

Terrez said the shelter was broken into early Wednesday morning, during which time a chain and padlock was stolen from the front gate and the kennel cages were unlocked.

A neighbor said she saw the dogs running around about 1:30 a.m., but she didn't see anybody inside," Terrez said.

Terrez and shelter employees Christina Beasley and Michelle Motley spent the morning and part of the afternoon tirelessly combing an area close to the shelter tracking down about 60 dogs that took a stroll. By noon, they had found 54 of their furry friends.

"I chased a couple down and put them in the car," Beasley said. "That wasn't an easy task."

According to Terrez, a handful of the animals were injured during dog fights. Two had to be taken to a local veterinarian to be treated.

"There were a few tears, rips and puncture wounds, but nothing too serious," Terrez said. "We pretty much have everything under control now."

Canines that remain on the loose as of Wednesday afternoon were three mixed German Shepherds, a mixed black Chow and a mixed black Labrador Retriever. If you have information about the animals, call Terrez at 331-7030.

Vehicle-related problems today existed long ago

By Rick Stortz

The automobile has long presented a number of dilemmas to society. How do we deal with drivers who are idiotic? How do we enforce motorist law for the benefit of public safety rather than revenue?

Consider these observations: There is a general agreement that this far there has been no satisfactory regulation of automobile. There is much testimony in regard to fast driving, the terrorizing of the timid, and repeatedly there is a note of anger and exasperation, which shows that some people's nerves have been tried to the point where endurance seems no longer possible.

Local regulation may be called a dead failure, because it is only spasmodically enforced, and because it is frequently used to make money for villages that wish to pile up the fines.

As the first full century of motoring comes to a close, we face traffic volumes and congestion that we didn't imagine even one or two decades ago. But it turns out, today's problems already were driving people to frustration at the beginning of the century. The aforementioned observations were published in The Nation magazine in October of 1907.

The brief story, "Regulating the Automobile," reviewed public sentiments toward the automobile in London and Long Island, N.Y. Even when they were few in numbers, automobiles were an aggravating factor in society.

Whereas today's renegade motorists mostly disturb other motorists, their misbehaving ancestors ruled pedestrians and travelers who still were making do with horses and carriages. The Nation observed, "The farmers' wives have given up their jaunts to town or village for fear of the touring-car that swings suddenly around corners without a note of warning, and the farmers complain of considerable property damage. The tourist who flits at thirty miles an hour through a village that he never expects to see again is generally indifferent to the harm he may do in passing."

Also noted was the damage done to roads by the heavy and speeding automobiles. There is a general agreement that, if the automobile is to use the general highways, they must be completely rebuilt with much heavier foundations, and that oil or some special preparation must be used to prevent the sucking up of the surface. Few automobilists would object, we think, to an annual State tax - which would be trifling compared to the cost of a single fire - imposed for the purpose of repairing the highways, because the automobilists would themselves profit by the improved roads.

And what do we do about those crazy drivers who frighten horses and scare the farmers' wives? The magazine argued that exemplary punishments must more than ever be invoked where there is flagrant misbehavior.

But the complaint in 1907 was that driving laws were rarely enforced except as needed to produce revenue for the local government. Signs that in this village the speed-laws are strictly enforced are met on every hand. Often they call for the ridiculously low speed of eight miles an hour, and frequently the warnings are merely an empty threat. Local regulation may be called a dead failure, because it is only spasmodically enforced, and because it is frequently used to make money for villages that wish to pile up the fines, if only to meet the extra bills for constables. The Nation wrote, "The latter frequently err in their readiness to provide their own salaries. In one case we know of, the justice of peace who imposed a fine subsequently admitted its injustice and asked the town board to remit it. But the board wanted the money, and kept it."

Frequently, special efforts are made to arrest people when there is a particular attraction, like a football game. The towns that molest no one the other 364 days of the year reap a harvest, and the motored motorist cannot be blamed for driving away with a feeling of injury and disgust. Intermittent enforcement in city or country avails little. The magazine summed up the situation, which does not seem to have changed much over the past 90 years.

What, then, are to be the remedies? The police powers of the great countries are surely not to remain impotent in the face of this new and valuable mode of locomotion; but so far, it must be admitted there are singularly few constructive suggestions offered anywhere.

The author's foresight was amazing on at least one count. He predicted that it would be difficult to come up with solutions to the motoring problem. The person who can suggest a means of regulating these varying speeds is certain of international fame. People are looking for him as eagerly in Germany and Italy as here in the United States or England. We're still looking.

Trivia

How much do you know about the Cards-Cubs rivalry?

By Kevin Carbery
Staff writer

If the Yankees historically are the Rolls Royce franchise of baseball, the Cardinals have to be in the luxury car category.

The Cubs, on the other hand, are the chicken truck up on blocks in the neighbor's yard.

The St. Louis National League Baseball Club has towered over Chicago's since the 1920s, when Branch Rickey's minor league system started feeding a steady stream of stars to the big leagues.

Meanwhile, the Cubbies have played poorly most of the years since World War II ended. The last time the Cubs appeared in a World Series game was 1945. Their most recent World Series championship came in 1908. Harry Caray lived his entire life without seeing the Cubs win the World Series.

I bring up these nuggets, because a new book, "The I-55 Series, Cub vs. Cardinals," allowed players, coaches, broadcasters and fans to give first-hand accounts of games and incidents between the teams over the years. It is a terrific work compiled by Chicago fan George Castle and St. Louis fan Jim Rygelski, who is a managing editor with the Suburban Journals.

The book is a fun read, and I'm not saying that merely because a couple stories I contributed have been included in its pages. In it, you get to hear from a wide variety of St. Louis and Chicago baseball lovers about games played over the years. It also includes a large amount of trivia, including the teams' yearly records against each other and which athletes have played for both clubs during their careers. You can find it in book stores around town.

For this week's trivia quiz, the questions are on the St.

Kids love 'em. Parents buy 'em. Schools ban 'em. Businesses cash in on 'em. They're Pokémon, a craze that's taken the nation's children by storm.

Pokemon-short for pocket monsters-leapt across the Pacific from Japan as Nintendo video games about a year ago, followed by a Warner Brothers cartoon and the biggest hit of all, trading game cards. Within a few months, Pokemon became perhaps the most wildly popular sensation among boys and girls between 4 and 15 ever to hit America.

"It's beyond belief," said Dennis Tibbles, store director of the Toys R Us at Northwest Plaza. "I've never seen anything like it. The young kids are just nuts over them. It's the craziest, most wonderful thing that could happen to a toy store. Some genius out there is making a fortune."

Pokemon characters come in an array of types: water, lighting, jungle, among others. In the video game and cartoon, Pokemon are pursued by trainers who catch them, then battle them against each other. Hence the Pokemon slogan: "Gotta catch 'em all." Each character, nurtured by its trainer and empowered by its success in battles, can evolve into new forms.

Ganesh Iyer, assistant professor of marketing at Washington University, said Nintendo has been able to use the trading cards and other merchandise to reinforce its video product line, keeping the fad alive long after most trends fade.

"They have been able to get young kids involved, and they have been able to hold kids' attention," Iyer said.

Last week "Pokemon: The

Pikachu and Ash have fun in a scene from the animated Japanese film "Pokémon: The First Movie."

"First Movie" opened to packed local theaters in the newest installment of the frenzy over these little creatures that fit inside a handheld ball. Nintendo, meanwhile, logged in with a third Pokemon game just in time for the Christmas rush.

Burger King restaurants, which reportedly invested $22 million on its movie tie-in promotion, plans to give out 57 different Pokemon toys with its kids' meals in coming weeks.

"It's probably the most successful toy promotion Burger King's every done," said Gary Hamilton, manager of the Burger King at 10458 St. Charles Rock Road in St. Ann. "Business is up probably 28 percent."

Worldwide, Pokemon products are expected to earn $5 billion to $6 billion by next

'Pokémon: The First Movie' opening earns $52 million

Pokémon tops at weekend box office

"Pokemon" is already a film phenomenon.

"Pokemon: The First Movie" made child's play of other new movies to earn $31 million in its first weekend, while repeat business helped it set a 5-day animated film record of $50.8 million.

"I think it will be on the screens through Christmas,"

Dan Fellman, Warner Bros.

president of domestic distribution, said. "Some theater managers said they saw the same kid's face three times."

The animated Warner Brothers film, which follows the mouse-like Pikachu and friends as they battle a bio-engineered enemy, continues to ride a wave of Pokemon popularity fueled by elementary school-aged children.

The craze began when Pokemon, which is a blend of the words "pocket monster," appeared as a Nintendo game and expanded into a trading card series.

"Pokemon couldn't be hotter than it is right now," said Paul Dergarabedian, president of Exhibitor Relations Co. Inc., which tracks the box office. "Kids are insatiable for entertainment and they'll consume everything that comes out in a big way."

The Pokemon phenomenon originated in Japan more than three years ago as a Nintendo Game Boy game about little monsters with special powers. It once was best-known for the cartoon episode that sent 700 Japanese viewers to hospitals when they reacted, some with epilepsy-like spasms, to a scene that flashed bright colors in rapid succession.

Pokemon has quickly expanded into cartoons, comic books and trading cards.

The movie was made in Japan and purchased by Warner for $5 million, with unspecified millions added for the English sound track and promotion. Its pace of $10 million per day eclipsed the previous animation record holder "A Bug's Life," which took in $45.7 million in five days around Thanksgiving 1998.

The film will receive competition from Disney's upcoming "Toy Story 2," but should enjoy repeat business through the holidays, Dergarabedian said.

Last week's top film, "The Bone Collector," saw a 28 percent drop in ticket sales but still held on for second place. The movie stars Denzel Washington as a bedridden New York cop who tries to track down a serial killer.

The debut of director Kevin Smith's controversial film "Dogma" ranked third with $8.8 million. The movie has raised the ire of some Roman Catholics for its irreverent look at the nature of faith.

"Sometimes there's no such thing as bad press," said Dergarabedian. "Film recognition and awareness by an audience are really important and the director has been pounding the pavement pretty hard."

Audiences had a wide range of choices this past weekend with films ranging from the romantic comedy "The Bachelor" to the tobacco industry drama "The Insider."

Filmgoers also continued to spook themselves with "The Sixth Sense," starring Bruce Willis. The movie finished tenth in the weekend box office derby with $2.7 million and has earned $267.8 million since debuting 15 weeks ago.

The ghost story could reach the $300 million mark if it receives a Golden Globe or Academy Award nomination, said Chuck Viane, president of distribution for Disney's Buena Vista Pictures.

The top 10 movies at North American theaters Friday through Sunday, followed by distributing studio, gross, number of theater locations, average receipts per location, total gross and number of

'Sleepy Hollow' offers type of gothic murder mystery

Film mixes horror, humor, romance all in one

By Ronnie Roy

"Sleepy Hollow" sounds like the perfect project for Tim Burton.

Washington Irving's classic tale of a Headless Horseman beheading people in a fog-enshrouded small town must have had strong appeal to the director of such films as "Batman," "Beetlejuice," "Edward Scissorhands" and "Nightmare Before Christmas."

And indeed, Burton has put together an intriguing mix of horror, humor, mystery, gothic imagery and romance.

Set in 1799, Johnny Depp stars as Ichabod Crane, a constable with little respect for New York's crime investigation techniques. When four people turn up without their heads in the nearby town of Sleepy Hollow, Crane's superiors are happy to ship him off to investigate.

Crane arrives at the home of Baltus Van Tassel (Michael Gambon), the richest man in town, as a party is going on. He quickly makes the acquaintance of Tassel's daughter, Katrina (Christian Ricci), and her jealous friend, Brom Van Brunt (Casper Van Dien).

Crane retires to the study, where he meets with the town's leaders - Reverend Steenwyck (Jeffrey Jones), Doctor Lancaster (Ian McDiarmid), Notary Hardenbrook (Michael Gough) and Magistrate Philipse (Richard Griffiths).

The town leaders are convinced who is behind the gruesome deaths - The Headless Horseman. The Horseman (Christopher Walken) was a Hessian soldier who terrorized the area in year's past. Eventually he was ambushed, beheaded, and buried in the woods outside of town. Now he has returned.

Crane, naturally, thinks the whole story is foolish, until he has a run-in with the villain and witnesses his brutality (and lack of head) first-hand.

What follows is a gothic 'whodunit.' Crane is convinced the Horseman isn't just killing people randomly, and must be controlled by someone with specific murders in mind. "Sleepy Hollow" works thanks to strong performances and visual effects. Making a believable Headless Horseman are stuntmen Ray Park and Rob Ince. Ince plays the 'riding' Horseman while Park (Darth Maul in "Star Wars - The Phantom Menace") handles the fighting sequences.

"Sleepy Hollow" is a Scott Rudin/American Zoetrope production of a Tim Burton Film. It is rated R.

Pokémon craze infects area youth year, Iyer said. Rick Tess, manager of the Fantasy Shop, 7525 N. Lindbergh Blvd. in Hazelwood, said the craze over Pokémon cards surpasses anything he's seen in terms of card-collecting, even dwarfing "Magic: The Gathering," to date the most popular fantasy card game.

"It's a very strange phenomenon," Tess said. "I've never seen anything like Pokémon."

To Adam Tichenor, a 9-year-old fourth-grader at Lawson Elementary School in Hazelwood, there's nothing strange about Pokémon.

"They're cool," said Adam, of Florissant, who in 11 months has collected 141 of the 150 different Pokémon character cards, not counting his 47 in Japanese. "They look neat and their names are neat."

Adam's mother, Chris Newton, said her son does more chores around the house to earn extra money to buy his cards. The cards range in price from about $3.25 for a pack of 11 to $10 for a pack of 60. Rare cards and Japanese cards cost more.

"He's learned discipline from them," she said.

Karen Haller of Florissant, whose son, Dean, 11, and daughters, Katie, 8, and Kayla, 4, all have Pokémon collections, said she buys cards for her children to reward good school work.

"We go all around looking for places that have them because they sell out so fast," Haller said.

Tess and Tibbles both said they have a hard time keeping the cards in stock.

"If I get six boxes of booster packs in that's about 400 packages—they'll sell out in four to five hours," Tess said. "We always have to put a limit on the number of cards per person. Our point of view is we can make more people happy that way."

Pokemon has come under fire from some quarters, however. Some schools have banned or restricted the cards to after-hours because of fights and thefts resulting from the craze.

The card game, some critics have said, promotes gambling.

But Tibbles said even Monopoly could be said to encourage gambling, adding of Pokemon: "It's a game of luck and a game of chance, but there's a little bit of skill involved. Some people are concerned that it encourages gambling. I don't see that. ... It's just a game."

More than anything else, the Pokemon craze has baffled parents, who hear their children talking in great detail about strange creatures with names like Pikachu, Charmander and Rattata.

"There should actually be a support group for Pokemon parents," Hess said in jest.

But Jerry Bosse, a child psychologist at Aaron Psychology Center in Maryland Heights, said he sees little harm in the Pokemon phenomenon. In fact, he said, expressing violence vicariously through play, gaining control over Pokemon as "trainers" and becoming experts in an area adults fail to understand is part of healthy child development.

"Everybody's a Pokemon fan," Bosse said. "There's always a craze. It seems to me to be a normal part of being a kid."

'Felicia's Journey' unnerving, catches audience off-guard

The latest film from Atom Egoyan, who scored Academy Award nominations two years ago for writing and directing "The Sweet Hereafter," could be called "The Deadly Present."

How can that be, you may ask, especially given the lilting purr of an English Midlands accent affected by the movie's star, Bob Hoskins, in uncharacteristically courtly form?

It's Egoyan's way to address potentially sensationalistic material indirectly, even obliquely, to catch the audience off-guard. The result - "Felicia's Journey" - is perhaps the quietest film ever made about a serial killer, though no less unnerving for preferring the muted to the macabre.

At heart, Egoyan's style is one of a clinician whose apparent cool sometimes leaves you wondering whether he has a heart. But there's something to be said for this director's stealth, which keeps its distance from emotions that other filmmakers would quickly wallow in.

Like "The Sweet

Hereafter," which was drawn from Russell Banks' wounding novel, "Felicia's Journey" has a literary source in the fiction of William Trevor.

And, unusual for the movies, this film is in essence what in the theater is called a "two-hander" - a duet turned face-off between putative friends who end up potentially murderous adversaries.

At the start, there's little to suggest the intentions of Hoskins' character, Joseph Hilditch, a catering supervisor who inspires affection among his staff at work but spends evenings alone fussing around the enormous kitchen of his rambling home.

Hilditch finds companionship in grainy videotapes of a decades-old cooking program hosted by Gala (Arsinee Khanjian), a cheerily eccentric Frenchwoman who is glimpsed in the footage alongside her plump and clearly discomfited young son.

The hapless young boy, of course, grows up to become the seemingly benign, if no less eccentric, Hilditch - a man who turns preparing a roast lamb into a fastidious essay in culinary finesse.

Into this ordered yet solitary life comes Felicia (Elaine Cassidy), a 17-year-old Irish girl who has arrived in England in search of her boyfriend so she can tell him she is pregnant.

Unable to locate him, Felicia strikes up a hesitant friendship with Hilditch, whom she meets when her quest mistakenly takes her to Hilditch's catering plant.

The two bump into each other a second time and, before long, Hilditch is volunteering to house the homeless Felicia - especially since, he is careful to volunteer, his own (non-existent) wife is ailing in the hospital.

"Another person's trouble can lift the mind, Felicia," explains Hilditch, whose remarks are rife with mock proverbs. ("A child is a blessing, Felicia, never forget that," he adds chillingly later on.)

But what seems like a meeting between two emotionally wayward, kindred souls begins to sour, as Felicia learns the fates of various other teen-age girls to have fallen under Hilditch's gently spoken spell.

And yet, the film refuses to take the easy way out by demonizing Hilditch. In its reined-in manner, "Felicia's Journey" allows for the possibility of healing, so that Hilditch's reference to Felicia as "my special angel" isn't necessarily as sick as it seems.

The movie makes particular demands on its two leads, who admirably underplay their ultimately fraught rapport.

By contrast, Khanjian - Egoyan's real-life wife - is deliciously over-the-top as the daffy, demanding mother, while Claire Benedict stays just the right side of caricature, playing an itinerant preacher whose unexpected arrival prompts the film's climax.

Much like another Englishman, Michael Caine, Hoskins seems to be enjoying a career remake, opting out of more mainstream fare in favor of the quirky, character-driven roles that first brought him to attention in "Mona Lisa" and "The Long Good Friday."

If he isn't quite the revelation here that he was last year as the wrecked boxing coach in Shane Meadows' "TwentyFourSeven," that's only because the current performance - like the film as a whole - is a mite too studied.

Newcomer Cassidy enters completely into the riven world of Felicia, a child-woman whose romantic dreams over time become cries for survival. That Felicia not only survives but even prospers is perhaps the ultimate.

"Felicia's Journey" is an Artisan Entertainment release, produced by Bruce Davey. Running time: 116 minutes.
